

INAUGURAL WORK & LABOUR STUDIES UNDERGRADUATE CONFERENCE

Thursday March 14th, 2019 at York University

CALL FOR PRESENTATIONS

We invite undergraduate students to submit conference presentation proposals on any topic related to Work and Labour Studies. This might include but is not limited to: precarious work, migrant and informal labour; the gig economy and interactive work; care work, household & emotional labour; non-profit and cooperative labour; unions & social movements; policy approaches and legislative solutions to advancing equity, diversity and inclusion; social inequality and labour internationalism

Each participant will have 15 minutes to present their work on a thematically organized panel. To submit your proposal, please fill out the Google Form available HERE. Submissions are due Friday February 15th, 2019.

WHY SHOULD YOU SUBMIT A PROPOSAL?

- Meet experts and influencers in the field of work and labour studies face-to-face
 - It's a great networking opportunity with faculty and students
 - Strengthen existing skills and develop new ones
- Meet like-minded peers interested in creating a labour market that meets 21st century challenges
 - Great practice for graduate school and entering the world of work
- Each student will receive a Certificate of Participation, which looks great on a resumé
 - Learn about your Rights in the Workplace
- Coffee breaks and snacks, including a pizza lunch, will also be provided
 - Have fun and learn something new

For more information, please contact Dr. Carlo Fanelli (fanelli@yorku.ca).

Department of Social Science

